

The Spirit Moves Them

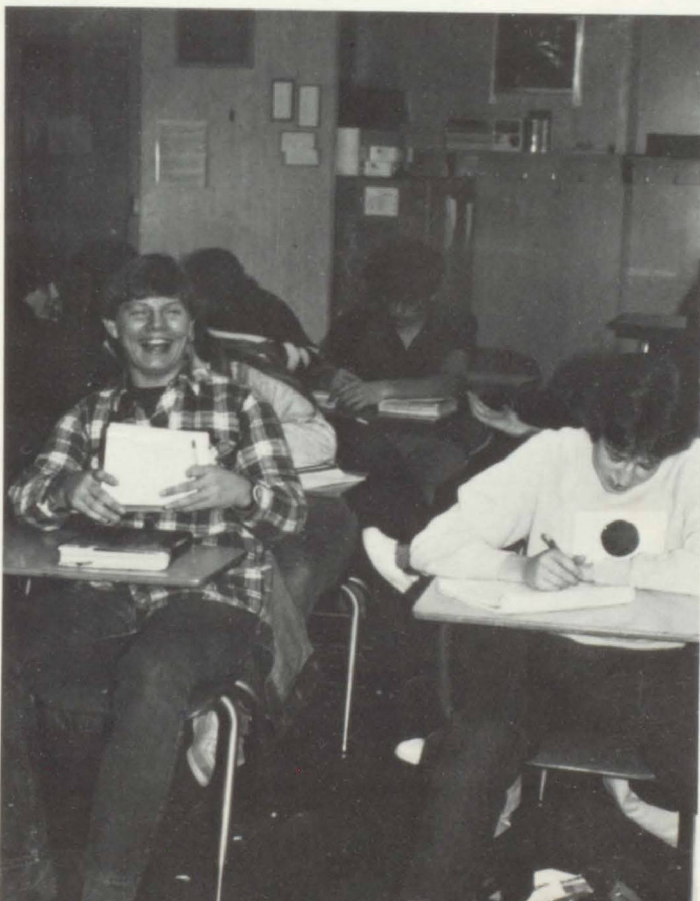

The AHS spirit leders, Mrs. Miller, Mrs. Luneack, and Mrs. Seals are discussing some new ideas for raising the school's spirit.

Have you ever heard the statement, "Ain't isn't a word!"? You probably have, more than once, and more than likely, it was in your English class. Since the English language is such an important part of our lives, our English teachers have the big responsibility of teaching us to write and speak our language properly.

Most students say that it is the teachers who make the class fun; they're always willing to help. These teachers have a lot of school spirit, also. Mrs. Seals keeps a year-long display in her classroom of the sports stories in the newspaper and of any student honored. Mrs. Luneack is the sponsor for the senior class and shows up for a lot of the sporting events. Mrs. Miller can usually be seen at most sporting events and even treated the football players to a breakfast the morning of Homecoming.

Obviously, the English teachers at Ashley are not only teachers but also spirit leaders at AHS.

Beginning Composition is a class that is good for getting to know one another, especially when you need a proofreader as Pat Cordray and Eric Cook discover.

Reading Romeo and Juliet is a traditional ninth grade literature project. Freshmen Willie Bywater and Amy Burk are enjoying the experience.
