

A New Outlook

New Teacher Adds Enthusiasm

Fellow colleague and friend, Karen Martinez, feels that home economics teacher, Mrs. Connie Miller, is "Really energetic and concerned about students. She has a lot of enthusiasm. She works hard and is an asset to our school."

Considering this comment, everyone who takes one of Mrs. Miller's classes should benefit. One way Mrs. Miller brings about a new outlook on things is by using guest speakers for many of her classes. For Health she had a cosmetologist come in to demonstrate on students' hair. A few eager students volunteered to have their hair tinted and gelled into the most contemporary looks. Also during Health class a Michigan State Trooper came in to speak on alcohol and drugs. In consumer economics Mrs. Miller brought in a car salesman to demonstrate the art of buying a car. Later in the semester a representative from Davenport College demonstrated to the class the way to dress for success.

Many students tend to feel the same way about their home ec. teacher, and Holly Harlow, senior, is no exception. Holly says, "She's helpful, understanding, and more interested in what she gives than gets." When asked what the most important thing was that she learned from Mrs. Miller, Theresa Fabus replied, "Preparing us for the real world."

Our new home economics teacher, Mrs. Connie Miller, can usually be found smiling. Devising learning material from dittos is just part of the job.

Tina Frederick, Pat Lanczynski, and Patti Brzak reflect on the easygoing and relaxed attitude of Mrs. Miller's classes.

The senior economics class formed groups and studied food budgeting and buying.

As part of one groups, Duane Schneider was in charge of making orange juice.
