

Rain, Rain, Go Away!

What do you have when you mix 28 seniors, 10½ inches of rain, and palm trees? Well, ask any of the seniors and they'll tell you — a great senior trip that will be a memory they'll never forget.

On March 25, 1987, the seniors and two chaperones, Mrs. Luneack and Mr. Hendricks, flew to Orlando, Florida.

The first day at Florida, Thursday, the seniors were to spend the day at Wet-n-Wild. Due to thunderstorms and the closing of the park, they had to leave early. The next day was a little bit better, though, with light rain and partly sunny skies at Walt Disney World.

Saturday, they gave Wet-n-Wild another try and finally found a little sunshine. Many seniors found a little sunshine. Many seniors spent the remainder of the day browning themselves at the hotel pool and shopping.

The seniors received information about the Cocoa Beach area Sunday by listening to their bus driver — the unforgettable Tony Sides — on the way to Cocoa Beach. Getting settled in and shopping finished the day.

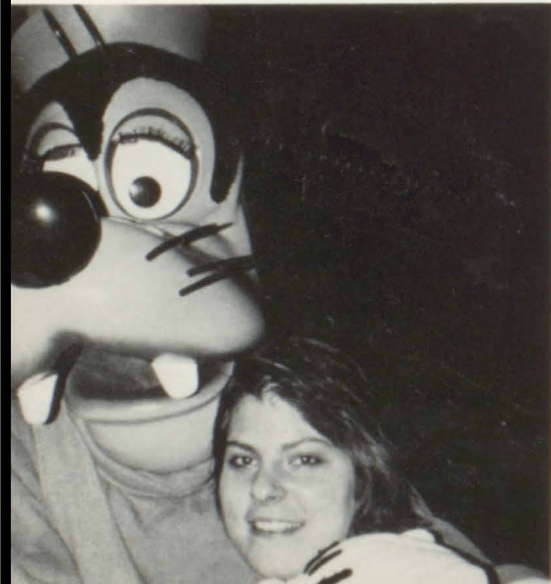

Monday, Dick Moore and Herb Russell even decided to give surfing a try. They received their first taste of sunburns and Solarcane with partly sunny skies and hot sun.

Kennedy Space Center was an educational experience for all of the seniors. The class also viewed "The Dream is Alive" at the IMAX Theatre. Tuesday night ended with a buffet dinner at Duffs.

Unfortunately, the seniors' day to leave was the most beautiful day of their stay. Even with the rainy weather, however, the seniors had an excellent trip, one which they will always remember.

Senior Trip Is Wet 'n Wild

Scared stiff, the seniors anxiously wait the plane's take-off, but once in the air they find it isn't as bad as they had imagined. They are served snacks on the plane. Cara Burk, Mike Turner, and Deann Gross clearly are enjoying the experience.

"Hey guys, be careful!", yells Pat Lanczynski as his fellow classmates bury him in the sand at Cocoa Beach. Later, the class ends the day with a pizza party and a movie.

During a rainy, but fun day at Disney World, seniors meet many new people. Jole Tupica hugs a new friend, Goofy.

Kennedy Space Center is filled with many educational things to do. Lori Haruska and Cynthia Keller both have the opportunity to sit in a moon car for the first time. The class also enjoys visiting the IMAX Theatre at the center and viewing "The Dream is Alive."
