

Who's Got Spirit? We Do!

Rain Can't Dampen Them!

On those cold, rainy fall nights, as many fans sat wrapped in a blanket, the football varsity cheerleaders were desperately trying to lift the spirits of the football team and the diehard fans who braved the weather to watch.

The football cheerleaders struggle at every game to keep the spirit going. It is a challenge because the crowd is mobile and keeps moving down the sidelines as the teams move down the field.

Young Team Fights Nerves

"I was really nervous! I was so afraid I was going to mess up!" moaned Nicole Peters. It isn't easy being a first time cheerleader. Many people think trying to fill the crowd with spirit is easy. The only way these seventh and eighth grade cheerleaders accomplished this was by hard work and commitment.

These girls not only worked hard, but also held a Rock-A-Thon and sold Tupperware to raise money for uniforms.

Vets Work On Spirit

Even though the varsity and JV cheerleaders didn't have many girls on their squads, they were able to show their spirit. One way was by designing and preparing spirit-filled posters.

At each pep assembly, the girls prepared a candy jar that was given to the class with the most spirit. Using this incentive, the cheerleaders were able to build up the spirit and enthusiasm needed to keep the team trying their best.

Seventh Grade Cheerleaders: Jenny Felton, Sharon Keck, Ronda Cook, Angie Camp, Corrine Page, Nicole Peters

Eighth Grade Cheerleaders: (clockwise from top) Brenda Saylor, Janette Stehlik, Danielle Burk, Jennifer Keck, Shawn Sopocy