

STUFFED INTO THE hideaway corner next door to the library, Kim Beck checks over an essay while Mrs. Johnson looks on.

HIDING FROM THE world, Traci Hardman escapes to her private paradise (under the bed) to catch up on her social studies.

When studying gets tedious that's when people resort to

Weird Cramming

Cracking the books and preparing for classes is a fact of life many of us choose to ignore until the last minute. But we all have to study at one time or another, and what sets some apart from others is the odd way they go about it. While many choose the boring way out and sit at a desk late at night with a desk lamp burning the eyes out or flop on a bed, there are some that concentrate better in a slightly different environment.

SOAKING UP RAYS while drinking from the fountain of academia, Angie Bennet crams for a test in her favorite place, the tire swing.