It's Your Business

For the student who enjoys the fast pace of the business world, Ashley offers typewriting and accounting. Typing classes are very popular among the students, since typing is an escape from the dreaded "writers cramp." The class consists of a lot of memorization, for one must remember where each key is. The class not only has to practice typing, but also must take tests and quizzes on such things as the parts of a typewriter and how to type formal letters properly. David Murdock, pictured below, Shows that not all the work is done on the typewriter.

Accounting, which is working with numbers, is popular among students who wish to pursue a clerical career or for the student who just plain wants a taste of the business life. Accounting requires a lot of time-consuming figuring, and helps a student prepare for life after graduation. The class is beneficial to any student, for it teaches students to do such things as balance check-books and figure tax forms.

Some English

This year proved to be exciting for the English department. The eighth graders got a taste of the high-kicking hoedown life when Mrs. Luneack gave them a day off to square dance to some real country music. The Advanced Grammer class enjoyed an entire day at the Alma College Library while they gathered material for their research papers, ate yummy food such as chili-and-cheese french fries and nachos at the college restaurant, and thought about their peers sitting at home going through their routine school day. The juniors in Speech put on the annual Toast and Roast to say goodbye to the class seniors. Both giggles and tears were evident as each senior received a toast and roast from their classmates. Crista Ruff, pictured to the left, wrote and read a poem to offer one last farewell to the future alumni. It was a special event which contributed to the excitement of the year.
