

While Most Students
Complain About Lots Of Work, These Students Say

Pour It On!

Let's face it. Most of the classes you take aren't that difficult, but every once in a while you get a class that is just plain tough. These are the classes you moan and groan about, but in the end, they're the ones you remember the best. I think everyone will agree that math, French, and chemistry all require students to hit the books.

"I really like French," admits Duane Payne. "Despite its difficulty, it's fun; the only thing about it that's really hard is having conversations completely in French. I'm glad I took it, though.

Chuck Howes just loves college algebra. "I love the teacher. Mr. Hendricks is great. It's fun. We just love to have fun." He does have some serious reasons for liking it too, though. "It's a challenge but it will probably come in handy in college. Even though I have to struggle with it, it's good to be exposed to it."

Although cries of, "I hate Chemistry," are pretty common, most students do kind of like that dreaded class. Ann Fabus said she almost was scared into dropping it, but now she's glad she didn't because she enjoys the challenge. She did have one bit of advice for future chemistry students: "You just have to read, read, read!"

THOUGHTS OF HEXAFLURAPLATINATE (III) go through Amy Andersen's mind as she brushes up on the process for naming ligands for Chemistry class.

Cracking
THE BOOKS

