

Unique Projects . . .

Original or Just Straight From The Heart

What do you think of when you hear "projects?" Romeo and Juliet? Or the Presidential Physical Fitness Test? Whatever comes to mind always brings a groan or a moan, but when the project is finished it's usually pretty impressive.

The Presidential Physical Fitness Test is probably the least liked part of phys ed class. Trying to reach the outstanding level, students must push themselves.

Whether it's running, jumping, or pull-ups, they must work to reach the top. Mr. Larry Walden stated he usually starts getting them in shape about two months before the test by making them run more and more each day.

Romeo and Juliet projects seem to have become a tradition in freshman English. Mrs. Ruth Seals commented with a chuckle, "I've had students do this forever."

What's the most unique project ever made? Pillows, paintings, pizza spelling Romeo and Juliet in olives, and even a video tape with a Siskel and Ebert style review of Romeo and Juliet are among the candidates for the honor. "I don't know if 'unique' is the word. I'd say original. There've been many originals," stated Mrs. Seals. "They all come up with their own ideas."

Thursday, November 3, 1988, the social studies department held a mock election for students, grades 7-12. The students were able to vote for the offices of president, vice president, senators and even three proposals. Over 158 students voted, electing George Bush and Dan Quayle as president and vice-president and passing all three proposals.

No matter what the projects are, it takes creativity and hard work to achieve the best. What it takes to be the best is "makin' it click."

AN IMPRESSIVE 6'3" enables Heidi Harlow to reach the Outstanding level in the standing long jump during the Presidential Physical Fitness Tests.

"IT WAS A FUN EXPERIENCE just to get ready for the mock election," commented Charlie Howes. He and Jody Felton were just two of 158 Ashley students who cast their votes on Thursday, November 3, 1988.
