

Sunburns, Craziness,
And Togetherness . . . All
In Five Days!

On March 18 the senior class left the cold, snow-covered ground of Michigan and by night were swimming in the clear blue water of their pool in Orlando, Florida. On Sunday, getting up early and rushing to Space Mountain was just the beginning of a fun-filled day at Disney World. Monday they baked in the sun, taking a trip to Wet-N-Wild. They swam in the wave pool, and the whirlpool, and traveled through dark tunnels on inner tubes. Tuesday, they tried stuffing everything back into their suitcases for the trip to Satellite Beach. Now, imagine lying in a soft bed, looking out a patio door that opens up to a balcony, feeling the breeze blow, and hearing nothing but sea gulls and ocean waves slapping. This was the life. Wednesday they had the whole day at the beach and pool. They played football, jumped the waves, and built sand castles. Thursday started with a breakfast buffet at the hotel and then to Ron Jon's surf shop. The next stop was Kennedy Space

THE EXHAUSTED, BURNT, BUT YET TOGETHER SENIOR CLASS pile themselves together last time for a group shot at Kennedy Space Center.

FEELING A LITTLE GRITTY might have described David McElhaney after his so-called buddy, Jim Foote, succeeded in burying him alive on Satellite Beach at the seniors' hotel in Florida.

Center. At one o'clock they watched, "The Dream is Alive," Then the trip came to an end, as they left Orlando airport. Many souvenirs and sunburns returned with them to Michigan, but the greatest thing of all was the strong friendships.

Hangin'
UP
THE 80's

SILLY AS EVER, Warren Faber shows off some of his natural talents, while heading to some shops for last minute souvenirs.