

Whether it's paper-work or dirty work, librarians and custodians

Keep Smiling

Every day, we see our custodians doing their jobs, wearing a smile on their faces. Even though they look happy, they still usually have at least one thing about their job that gets to them. But whether it's cleaning the school after it's been toilet-papered or fixing a broken window, the custodians always do their jobs well!

Our librarian feels that coming into a cold library is one of the disadvantages of her job. In fact, paper work of most kinds is not at all Mrs. Gavenda's favorite time killer, since it robs her of time to spend with the students, who are, she claims, the best part of her job.

"IT'S A DIRTY JOB, BUT ..." that's how Connie Johnson feels about cleaning the urinals in the boys' bathroom. This is one job that Connie hurries along with.

"HAND IT OVER ..." Getting the absence slip, is one thing Mary Gavenda hates. If she doesn't know where a student is, she has to send an office girl, like Cyndi Surdock, to find them.
