

Teachers . . . They Do It All.

Teachers . . . don't you just hate them? They all get together and give you homework on the same day. They all give tests the day before vacations, and they only live to see you suffer. Right? Well, not here at Ashley.

We may miss out on some things by going to a small school but there are advantages, and the teachers are one of the best things about Ashley. Mr. Larsen doesn't have to take students on camping trips or take them hunting. It would be much easier for Mrs. Martinez not to have the mock presidential elections, and she doesn't have to bring her guitar to school for singalongs. Twenty years from now, when you think back to your high school days, you probably won't remember the eighth hour you got in Mrs. Luneack's English class, but you may remember the great birthday parties she had for her students. You probably won't think about all the work Mr. Hendricks and Mr. Andersen made you do in class, but you'll never forget the great times you had playing football for them. The extra things done by all of our teachers not only make life more bearable for their students, the teachers enjoy doing them, too.

PLANNING THE STRATEGY for the game against Genesee, Mr. Andersen and Charlie Howes discuss Friday's defense. Mr. Andersen, or "Brucie," as he is known to the team, makes many contributions to the football program as the assistant coach.

SATISFY THEIR SWEET TOOTH, that's how Mr. Hendricks keeps his students tame. Matt Miller is glad to get his butterscotch after a hard day in math class. Mr. Hendricks, who has been passing out candy for five years, says he does it, "to make them feel at ease."

Mr. Sherman Hendricks
Mathematics

TESTING THE FOOD to make sure it's fit for students to eat, that's just the kind of guy Mr. Hornak is. But Jim Stehlik doesn't look happy about having his donut taken. Mr. Hornak needs his nourishment to keep the kids in line during his lunch patrol.

Mr. Paul Hornak
Business education