

A POPPING GOOD TIME . . . Traci Andersen makes popcorn for the students who were excused from exams and went to the gym for an activity period of volleyball, music or just talking.

OFFICE GIRL? Kevin Palmatier is one boy to serve in the office.

really appreciates the office practice students and says, "They're a great help and I couldn't do it without them."

Brains And Heart, Too

This year, the National Honor Society wasn't only a group of intelligent students, this group was warmhearted and had lots of creative ideas. The National Honor Society was more active than ever before. At Christmas they adopted a needy family of seven. Not only did they have a Rock-a-thon on an entire Sunday for their family, but they also gave personal pledges of money. Some of the teachers and staff members also helped out with donations. This was also the second year the National Honor Society had a Junior High Academic Breakfast in the spring to honor young scholars.

FHAer's Sponsor Dance!

The Future Homemakers of America were fairly inactive, although they once again put on the Junior High Prom. This event was a chance for the seventh, eighth and ninth graders to experience a formal occasion. The gym was beautifully decorated with hearts and streamers. There was a disc jockey who played love-filled songs. The girls wore Southern belle gowns that were their older sister's or even new. Some of the guys dressed in suits and rented tuxes. This dance is, in a way, a rehearsal for the big event of later years.

Busy! Busy! Busy!

Filing, running errands, sorting mail and picking up slips are just a few of the chores that the office practice students do to help secretary, Phyllis Shaw, with her many duties. Phyllis teams come in all sizes and interests. The athletic field certainly isn't the only place where teamwork is important.

Clubs and service groups also require that individual commitment to group effort.

Greatly Appreciated!

The student council was busy with the big fall event of Homecoming and in late winter, Twirp Week and Puttin' on the Hits. Although busy with all the yearly activities, the student council still managed to keep up staff morale with things such as thank you notes, cupcakes, candy and flowers.
