

QUICK ON THE DRAW is what you have to be to beat the member of the quiz team to the bell. Perry Thompson, Matt Miller, Amy Burk and Michelle Wolfe sacrifice a few hours after school to practice and be the first ones to ring in.

HARD WORK AND DEDICATION are necessary to make the grade in journalism. Tina Leavitt and Angie Bennett put all of their effort and concentration into making their deadline.

Organizations Add Life To Everyday Routines

This year the students were abuzz with the many extracurricular activities and organizations that students could try.

Can I help?

One organization that generates a lot of interest is cadet teaching. Students do odd jobs and errands for the teacher of their choice. Both elementary and high school teachers can always find a student willing to lend a hand with whatever needs to be done. These students do everything from correcting papers to typing out dittos, decorating rooms and running errands.

Team faces new challenges

The quiz team is another organization some students enjoy. This year's quiz team consisted of five players. Their new coach, Mrs. Karen Martinez, led them to three matches. Although they may not have walked away with the trophy, they had several exciting and competitive matches, and the experience was good for the two students who will be returning next year.

Spicing it up

The journalism staff did a tremendous job this year. Under capable leader, Mrs. Suzanne Luneack, they were able to add a little spice to the Spotlite with columns such as "Of Crime and Passion," and the new, lighter tone in the sports section. The students put in extra time and a lot of effort to meet deadlines.

New club big hit

A new organization made a big hit at Ashley. The art club, started by Mrs. Marilyn Gearhart, gave students who really enjoy art work a chance to show what they're made of. They worked on a mural in student assistance coordinator Mrs. Connie Bongard's room, designed a mural for the cafeteria, and even had time to do their own thing. Mrs. Gearhart hopes to do additional projects with the art club next year. She would also like to take them to visit museums because she knows these students would really enjoy fine art.

Organizations are a big part of Ashley and, by the number of participants, the students really enjoy the spice they add to everyday life.
