

They ended the year with a performance at the Bavarian Festival in Frankenmuth in June.

Once you make up your mind to do a project in social studies, you can find out many interesting things about other countries. You can even find out more about our own state when the Michigan history class goes to the state capitol on a field trip.

Time is what it takes, when you put your hard work and dedication into a woods project. They made things that were fun to play with, like the toy cars that were rubber band powered. They also made neat little basketball games which used a plastic spoon as the shooting arm.

We get it done, from coaxing Mary to giving us a pass, to talking the school board into letting us wear shorts. We may be small, but we build big leaders and that's what it takes to get it done.

Annmarie Fabus: shop rat or salutatorian? Annmarie decided to take a shop class this year so that if she ever had to refinish anything, she'd know how. Annmarie chose to make this step stool because she thought she could also use it as a knickknack shelf. Annmarie found shop very interesting. She had never had any shop classes before and felt it was definitely worthwhile.

"CAN I HELP YOU?" That's the usual inquiry heard from counselor, Mr. Fred Sanford. Cyndi Surdock was one of the many seniors Mr. Sanford helped to get a jump on college.

HARD WORK OR FUN? Trumpeteer Heidi VanZee thinks it's both as she works along with her fellow bandsmen, Joe Jungnitsch, Dominic Lowe, Stephanie Theil, Angela Brzak, Dawn Garcia and Tanya Schmidt. The band works diligently on a piece for the spring band concert.
