

HOPPING AROUND IN A SACK is hard enough with just one person, but J.C. Stoll and Kelly Jurstik show that two can do it with ease. Kelly and J.C. teamed up at the Snake Dance during Homecoming week.

Do a marching band, girls in beautiful dresses, and a truck loaded with spirited football players sound familiar? Well, they should, because they are all a part of something that is familiar — our traditional Homecoming. The student council, eager to carry on the tradition, still felt there was more to be done with Homecoming, and set about trying to do something different.

So, add sack races, an organized whipped cream pie-in-the-face contest with football players joining in, a slave auction on Clash Day, and you've got a homecoming with a twist. The student council worked for one major goal, and that was to get Homecoming '89 off to a good start!

Each year the dwindling spirit shows through in the lack of participation in the dress-up days. This year the spirit was at an all-time low; that is, until Homecoming Day arrived. Did you know that war paint is not worn by only Indians? The football players proudly displayed their "Bad Boy" images by wearing blue and gold stripes on their faces and chanting their new "Bad Boy" cheer. Yes, the day was a bit cloudy, but the Bear spirit was too contagious . . . this day was not to be spoiled.

Too soon our week was over. The hard work paid off for both the classes and the student council, as they turned out some of the best floats ever made at Ashley. The student council made it through with a smooth parade, and the football team had a great victory to end the day. Although spirit during the week was low, the students and fans found it when it really counted.

GETTING PUMPED UP on Homecoming day is what our guys do well. With a pep assembly at the firehall, this group showed their stuff. Everyone finally pulled together and gave the team that extra push they needed.
