

THE OPEN DOOR POLICY! What Mr. Walden enjoys most about counseling is the one-on-one contact with students like Robin Woody.

BOOKWORM? Mr. Fred Sanford grabs a minute or two to read in between his counseling jobs. One of Mr. Sanford's primary duties is to counsel students about their plans for college.

BUGGY-EYED, Adam Palmatier pins down his insects. In entymology, the class spends most of the time outside collecting bugs. The other time is spent classifying the insects.

From the dissecting lab in biology to foods class's indigestion, these students are Academics. That's a big term that scares people. It means words like study, homework, and grades.

Students at Ashley are able to take all kinds of classes: entymology, personal living, biology, chemistry, ceramics, and for the seniors, foods. Ceramics gave students a chance to work with their hands, molding and shaping objects. Heidi Harlow commented, "I loved ceramics, and my coil pot was superior to Melanie Zimmerman's and Erica Densmore's!"

Most people like to take home ec classes. Either they like to cook or sew, or they just like to have fun. But Jim Drummond had different ideas. Jim said, "I liked Personal Living because of the movies."

Science classes are always thought of as hard. Some are fun, like entymology. Joe Merignac reflected, "I liked catching the bugs, but the killing jars reeked after they had dead bugs in them."

This year, we saw a new face in the little room up by the library. Mr. Larry Walden took over as counselor for Mr. Fred Sanford when Mr. Sanford became ill. Mr. Walden commented, "I've always enjoyed the interaction with students most in teaching. This job allows me to do that without all the papers to check."

Students at Ashley have as many classes and extra-curricular activities than people from bigger schools, but they live up to the challenge.
