

Time Flies

When You're All Caught Up In Life's Games!

Much of the time of Ashley students is spent either participating in sports or attending athletic events. If they aren't putting in long hours at practice after school, they are giving their best in a game.

Student-athletes work hard in the classroom, keeping their grades up so that they can also work hard on the field. Sports require a lot of hard work and dedication, and our athletes here at Ashley sacrifice much of their free time to participate.

"Before the game starts, the clock runs endlessly but as soon as the buzzer goes off, time seems to fly by. I guess that's what they mean when they say 'Time flies when you're having fun!' " commented C.J. Lowe.

Anyone who has ever participated in a sport at Ashley understands the pressures they have to face from coaches, parents, and other students. On the other hand, respect is a great factor when you're an athlete. People tend to respect the sacrifices student-athletes have to make.

Ashley is a small community with a lot of spirit. Athletics bring the community closer together and keep everybody in touch.

WHO SAYS THAT INSIDE SOFTBALL PRACTICE CAN'T BE ENTERTAINING? Shelly Andersen and Amy Crumbaugh attempt to jump rope together to keep busy. Many inside practices are spent exercising and participating in relays.
