

Farewells Everywhere

Class That Made A Difference Leaves

Saying goodbyes can be easy, but sometimes they're so hard, they can make a person cry. People don't have to be very emotional to have tears brought to their eyes, either. Sometimes, that one special farewell can do it.

When the Class of 1992 left AHS, the goodbyes were hard. Many wonderful friendships will be strained because of the absence of one of the friends. This class was friends with everyone, including teachers and underclassmen. They'll try their hardest to keep those bonds there, but only time can tell if they're successful.

On the nights of swingout and graduation, there was much laughter. All the graduates were yelling and screaming about finally being "outta here", but there was pain. If you looked carefully into their eyes and closely studied their facial expressions, you could see the tears that were being hidden; they were saying goodbye to the best times of their lives.

Hopefully, when people look back on this class, in old yearbooks or newspaper clippings, perhaps they'll remember just how hard it was to say farewell to them, and for the Class of 1992 to say goodbye.

◆ A BIG STEP FOR THESE KIDS. Kelly Lytle and C.J. Lowe take their first step to becoming AHS graduates. Kelly and C.J. are both members of the NHS and each received scholarships during the graduation ceremony.

"I'LL MISS ALL OF THEM." Mr. Steve Larsen, class sponsor, gives his farewell speech to his favorite class at swingout. Mr. Larsen brought tears to the eyes of many of the graduates.

I wasn't really nervous about walking in. I was more concerned with keeping up with Monchea.
