

N ot Enough Time ever a minute, on or off the job

QUICK SHOT — Sara McGillis throws a newspaper to her customers on her weekly paper route. Sara delivers the paper two days a week.

Most teens complain about homework and extra-curricular activities; however, many students of the 90's also juggle a part-time job with school and extra-curricular activities.

Diane Mitchell, an employee at the St. Johns Burger King, says, "I get my homework done on Friday right after school, so that I don't forget to do it after work!" For Diane, working around her schedule comes easy, but most working students complain about not being able to spend a lot of time with friends, as in Shelly Hardman's case.

Shelly has worked at Seifert's Family Truck Stop for two and one-half years and commented, "Being with my friends is hard because I put in a lot of hours at work, but it's worth it!"

Even though teens sacrifice a few things because of a job, it gives them good experience . . .

Even though teens sacrifice a few important things because of a job, it gives them good experience before they graduate and enter the real work world. Diane summed it up: "My job teaches me responsibility and gives me a little knowledge how it's going to be to have a full time job!"

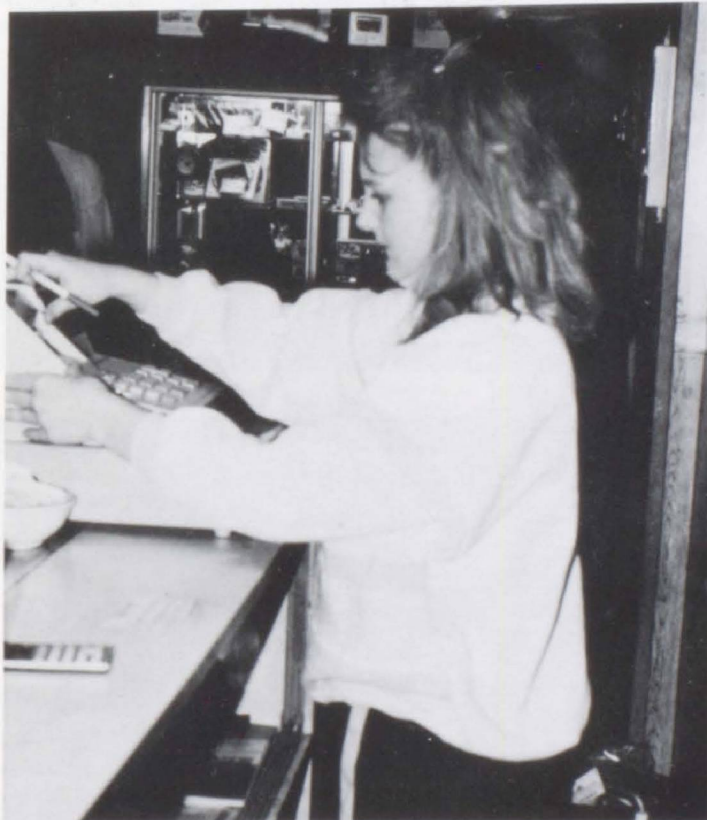

Jo Anna Thompson

What's tough about having a job while you're in school?

"It's a challenge for me when I have to work and to juggle my schedule so that I also have enough time for homework, sports, and myself."

Angela Brzak

CASHING IN. Shelly Hardman takes the money from a satisfied customer at her place of employment, Seifert's Family Truck Stop. She commented, "I like money so I don't mind working with it!"

J. Thompson