

Good Times Over

Getting out brings mixed feelings

On May 21, 1993, the seniors were ready to make their way out into the world.

Some cried and some just said, "We're out of here!" Graduation was, in some ways, different than they thought it would be. Underclassmen always look up to the seniors, wishing to be in their shoes, but by the end of the year when the seniors get out, they start to realize that the good times are over. "I may never see my friends again," commented Sharon Keck.

The finality of graduation didn't really hit at first. The seniors met in

... by the end of the year ... they start to realize that the good times are over.

Mrs. Bongard's room, where they adjusted their hats and arranged their robes. One senior stood apart from the rest, a thoughtful look on her face. Jonathon Pendleton slid his arm around Nicole Peters in a reassuring hug. Then Mr. Wayer walked in and gave the sign; it was time for them to walk to the gym. All the way they whooped and yelled. But as they entered the gym and lined up for the processional, they quieted. They knew this was it ... their high school days were over.

Shannan Felton

MIRROR, MIRROR ON THE WALL. Brenda Saylor takes a last look in the mirror as a senior at Ashley High School. Brenda takes her time to make sure that her hat is adjusted perfectly.

What will you miss most about high school?

"My friends. Also the art classes because I enjoyed them the most."

Nikki Melvin

S. Thiel

Graduating Class, 1993: First row: Brenda Saylor, Jenny Felton, Robin Woody, Sharon Keck, Dawn Strouse Second row: Nicole Peters, Andrea Becker, Nicole Melvin, Ronda Cook, Michelle Andersen, Angela Camp, Marsha Miller, Brandon Malek, Josh Follett, Jim Fabus Third row: Tim Bush, Jason Kostal, Ryan Kirkpatrick Back row: Kevin Saylor, Joe Skaryd, Jon Pendleton.