

INCREDIBLE INVENTION! Andrea Becker and Robin Woody demonstrate their product to their class, inspiring them to try their Big "B" Cereal and increase the size of their chest in just seconds.

M. Miller

RESUME, PLEASE. Mrs. Waller, from the Regional Service District, interviews Nikki Melvin during the mock interviews. Most students agreed that the interviews went well and were a great learning experience.

R. Woody

Look Out, World

Here come the Voc English kids!

The vocational English class was one of the largest this year, with 30 students. Students were trained to communicate effectively, allowing them to enter the job world ready to adapt to employers' needs. "All the speakers emphasized how communication skills are important on the job," commented student, Christine Porter.

The class explored several areas to help prepare for the working world; since interviewing is a central unit of most job-seeking, it was one of their largest projects, ending in actual interviews set up by the RESD.

Introducing their own products to the class exposed the students to getting up and presenting something publicly. Ms. Audrey Gebber, teacher, commented on this project: "That was fantastic; everybody did very well, and I was impressed with their creativity."

Preparing for college and teaching responsibility were other objectives of the class.

Andrea Becker

R. Woody

AMAZING BALL! Tim Bush and Ronda Cook show exactly what their product, a taffy ball, can do, from licking it to sticking it, or even throwing it, to the vocational English class.