

Organizations

Change comes in many ways in organizations: changes in members, activities, and even organizational groups! But something that will never change is that whatever you're involved in, it seems as if there is never enough time.

Most students juggle for time constantly. They may have jobs, homework, or other commitments, but they still find time to get involved.

Sometimes it's a compromise; for example, between acts of the drama club presentation, students may grab the moment to catch up on sleep, homework, or even the latest "stories".

Regardless of the group, the age, or how much time is required, there is always sacrifice.

You do learn to do the juggling required. Most students agree that it's worth it.

Robin Woody

TIME OUT!
Kris Seft crams in some homework during drama club rehearsal. It is standard procedure for cast members to bring blankets, homework, or food to rehearsal.

R. Woody