Girls win Ashley tournament

The junior high girls had great seasons, carrying on a fine tradition of girls' basketball at Ashley High. The seventh graders had a fantastic 9-3 record, and the eighth graders went undefeated for the second consecutive year, at 12-0.

The seventh grade girls, coached by John Haruska, won their games this past season by an average margin of 19.2 points per game. Traci Turner remarked, "I think our wins came from good coaching, practice, and great teamwork." These girls also won the Ashley tournament, taking first place by beating MPSH, 26-4. "We worked good together as a team and practiced hard," commented Lisa Maier.

The eighth grade girls, coached by Bill Cartwright, also had a great year, especially in scoring. The girls outscored their opponents, 537-169 points on the season. Amy Strouse reflected, "We mostly wanted to beat Chesaning by more than one point, like we did the year before last." The girls came through with their goal, beating the Chesaning Indians, 42-35. They also won the Ashley tournament hands down, beating the Irish of Mount Pleasant Sacred Heart by 25 points, 38-13. Kristie Spencer commented, "It's good to win at home and impress the home crowd. It showed them just how good we really were."

Both teams had tough practices to reach the standard of excellence that they carried out through the entire 1992 season.

Highlights

The seventh grade commented that their most memorable moment of their season was not during a game, but the celebration after the Ashley tournament.

The eighth grade team watched a usually calm and collected Kristen Fabus nearly get into a fight with a MPSH player. Kristen was ready to go after she felt she was wrongly fouled across the face.
