

scribble BELIEVE IT OR NOT, BUT... scribble

THESE UTTERLY PREPOSTEROUS COWS AND CREEPY CRITTERS ARE NORMAL AHS STUDENTS

scribble

W hen else could you find roaming cows, bleeding heads, and monsters from the deep? Halloween, that once-a-year time for merry making and disguised fun.

This year, Halloween fell on a Saturday, but that didn't keep the skeletons in the closet. Spirits soared just as high as ever. Students surprised and scared each other and the teachers throughout the day. Although spirits were high, there was one drawback. The tradition of Mrs. Bongard and Mrs. Gearheart was broken. They didn't dress up! They did have the Halloween spirit, however: Mrs. Bongard decorated her room and had parties in her classes.

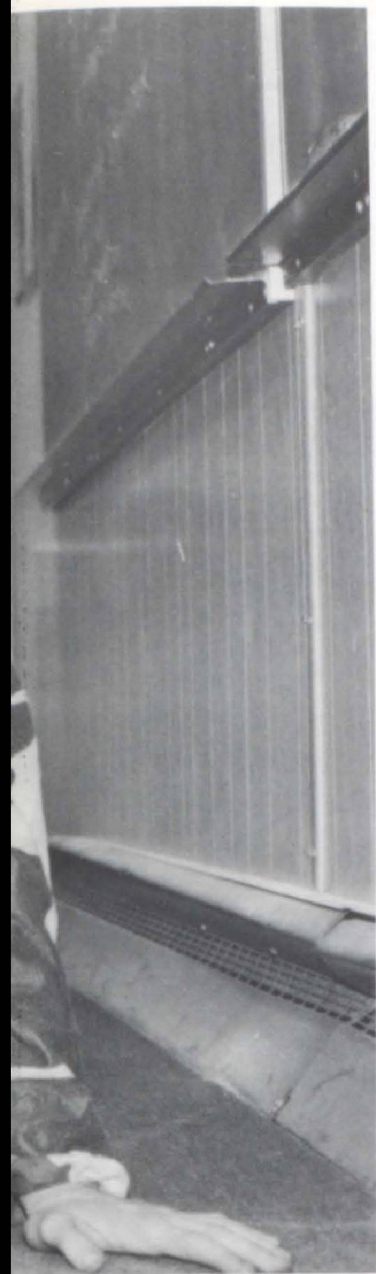

What would Halloween be without a . . . a . . . What is it? It's a Carhartt monster thing from the depth of Ashley! No, really, it's Tim Caswell. He was a real scream (literally). Between him and Shelly Hardman, who came back from the dead, there was no contest. Or was there? It seemed that two four-legged, barnyard grazers stole the show. Angie Brazak and Heidi Vanzee dressed up as cows. Their udders were prominently displayed and their spots were all in the right places. Angie commented, "I am not usually the type of person to dress up, but I thought it would be fun." Heidi remarked, "I've been around cows all of my life so it was natural to act like one."

Halloween is more than parties and candy: it's a time to cut loose and enjoy the time of year that lets you act like a kid again.

Jenny Powelson

IT'S A BIRD, IT'S A PLANE . . . IT'S DEFINITELY NOT SUPERMAN! Tim Caswell gave a convincing performance as a monster on Halloween. Tim's menacing manner made people do a double-take!

COWING AROUND! Angie Brzak and Heidi VanZee take time out to graze off the land. They both have the spirit of Halloween. Angie commented, "I love cows and dressing up as one for Halloween was the perfect chance to show it!"

CAT GOT YOUR TONGUE? Denise McElhaney and Shari Drummond chat during lunch on Halloween. Their costumes added to the excitement of the day. A variety of disguises were displayed during the day.

