

SERVICE IS THE NAME OF THIS GAME

Cadet Teachers, NHSers
Find Satisfaction
In Helping

Why do people join organizations? The answer is, usually, to be in a group or to serve a purpose. Some organizations manage to do both.

Cadet teaching is a group that does both. Being a cadet provides a service for the teachers, and also helps students out. Christine Porter cadeted for art teacher Mrs. Marilyn Gearhart's elementary students. "It was fun to see the kids use their creativity in their projects," Christine commented.

National Honor Society's big project is putting on both the scholastic breakfast and the academic banquet every spring. This year they also helped out with the blood drive held on May 6, in the new gym.

"It was fun to help with the breakfast and banquet because it was neat to recognize other scholars in the school," enthused new NHS member, Jaime Morris.

Shannan Felton

J. Ortman

Cadet Teaching Front row: Kim Contreras, Shannan Felton, Jenny Powelson, Dawn Garcia, Shelly Hardman, Dominic Lowe, Jason Pendleton Second row: Jennifer Maier, Shelby Osborn, Jason Saylor, Denise McElhaney, Sara Felton, Shasta Patterson, Dennis Belongia, Christine Cunningham, Lacey Crocker, Stephanie Thiel, Jo Anna Thompson Third row: Kris Sefl, J.C. Stoll, Ellery Sosebee, Marty Cartwright.

J. Morris

1 . . . 2 . . . 3 . . . ROLL! Cadet teacher J.C. Stoll is involved with showing the first graders how to do a backwards somersault. Tyler Reynolds has trouble so J.C. gets down on the mat to give him some help. One of the first grade projects is learning several tumbling moves.