Junior High Students Get Creative Paint, Draw, Work With Clay... Love It All!

When people think of art they usually visualize art museums filled with art from ancient times. Well, that isn't everything art is, and the seventh and eighth grade art class is proof of that. This is a class that experiments with a variety of different things; none of this stuff seems ancient to them.

These kids do many different things from painting and drawing to crafts and working clay. Denise Garcia said, "I love this class. My favorite project is the ceramics we are working on now."

Throughout the semester the students learn how to do things. They don't start as experts, they have to learn. Some students who thought they would hate art learned that they really liked or had a knack for it. Mrs. Marilyn Gearhart remarked, "This is an excellent class. They are all really good students to work with. They are not a rowdy class. I love them!"

PLEASE DON'T ROLL OFF THE TABLE! Lisa Strnad rolls ceramic clay to make a coil pot. Mrs. Gearhart remarked, "Ceramics is one of the kids' favorite projects."

RUB - A - DUB - DUB. Mindy Wallen uses gentle hands to carefully brush off the dust on her ceramic piece. Working with ceramics requires a light touch and a careful, steady hand.
