

Kids

Child Development Class Learns That Being A Parent Is A Huge Responsibility

"The reality of seeing kids, smelling them, and listening to them helps students better prepare themselves for deciding if they want that responsibility," remarked Mrs. Connie Bongard, class instructor.

Child Development is a class where you learn how to deal with children. A class that some students feel should be required so that students can see the movies about child abuse, child birth, and child neglect. Students say they want children but once they see the movie of actual childbirth, they think twice.

Mrs. Bongard also commented that the two things she'd like for her students to get out of the class are: "To decide if they can be a responsible parent and to learn how important it is to love and encourage children to help them grow up happy."

Shannan Felton

J. Morris

J. Thompson

ONCE UPON A TIME . . . Marna Polash reads to Nick Godfrey during the Child Development visit to Head Start. Reading is just one of the many activities the students share with the program's children.