

Groups get together for fun and to do

a good turn. . . organizations

Whether it's putting on Junior High Prom or raising money for Christmas, organizations are working at good deeds.

Student Council served donuts and apple cider to the students at Thanksgiving. They raised money for a needy family at Christmas. At the end of the year, the student council gave an outstanding college-bound senior a scholarship.

Joining the turn for good was the Future Homemakers of America. The FHA put on a Junior High Prom in the spring. This gave the younger students a special dance.

Also jumping on the bandwagon was the National Honor Society. They turned to bowling to raise money for a needy family at Christmas. Then at the end of the year, they hosted the Scholastic Breakfast and Banquet to honor the junior and senior high scholars.

Teachers, secretaries, librarians and administrators turned to cadet teachers and office practice students to help in the classroom, offices, and in the library.

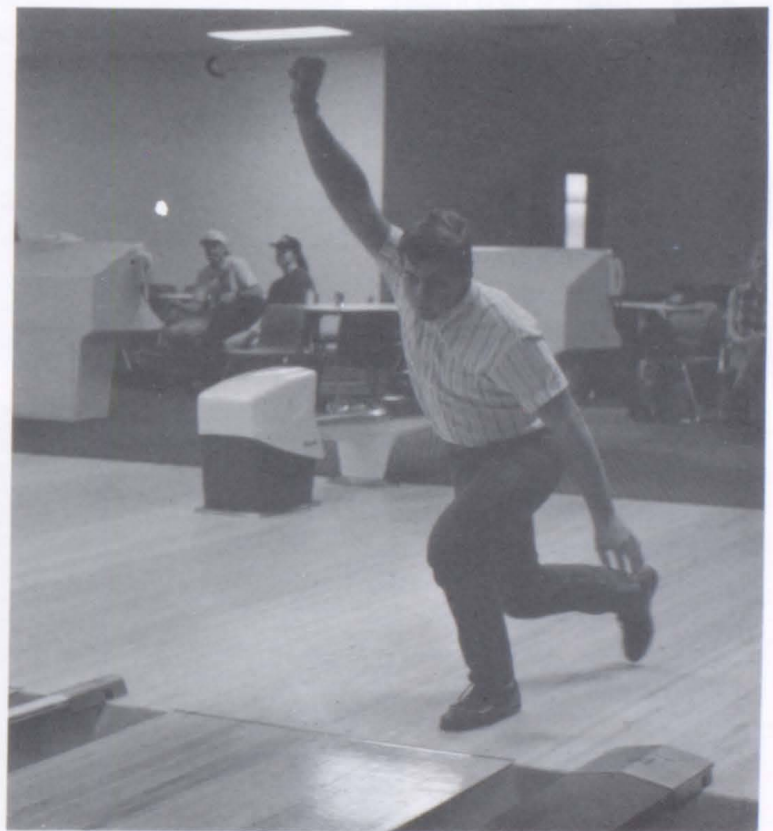

Groups like these have discovered an old secret: Doing something for someone else makes you feel good.

Jennifer Deniston

WILL YOU HURRY UP, MOM? Josh Saylor, Terri Kral, Kim Bush, and Seth Copsey pose patiently for pictures before taking off for the Junior High Prom. Kim commented, "At first I didn't like the idea of my brother Tony being there as DJ, but it turned out to be cool."

WHOA, BABY! Junior Lacey Crocker stops to get a drink with her trusty steed. Lacey is a member of the equestrian team.

STRIKE... Junior National Honor Society member Michael Strnad enjoys a night at the lanes. The NHS went bowling several times throughout the year.
