

JOURNALISM, JUST ANOTHER BLOWOFF CLASS? STAFF SAYS, "NO"

RIGHT FOOT BLUE... Jason Saylor, Jaime Morris, and Jennifer Denniston show their skills in a fun game of Twister. The journalism class takes a break from hard work for some fun.

COMPUTER LEARNING... Robert Czeiszperger, Mrs. Suzanne Luneack, and Travis Polash all pull together to try to figure out the computer program. "There was a lot of pressure on me to help others," said Travis Polash.

Free days, vendor runs, parties. These are all words associated with journalism. Is journalism one of those blowoff classes?

Definitely not. This year, for example, the staff faced problems such as computer failure, printer problems, lost disks, and programs getting erased.

For the first time, the journalism staff did all their publishing on computers.

"The students caught on well, even the new students," said journalism teacher, Mrs. Suzanne Luneack.

"The deadlines were most stressful," exclaimed student Robert Czeiszperger.

"We believe the yearbook will look better this year, since we did most of it ourselves," commented Luneack.

Jennifer Pendleton

SOMEONE TO DO MY DIRTY WORK! Jason Sutton shows Jeremy Saylor and Travis Polash that a slave can buy a slave. Student council sells the football players to raise money.

STUDENT COUNCIL: First row: Joe Beracy, Jason Pendleton, Sarah Brzak, Tony Bush, Marty Cartwright Second row: Brandi Burgett, Derek Dawson, Tony Miller, Carry Felton, Kim Bush, Jason McCrimmon Last row: Jason Saylor, Travis Polash, Kristen Fabus, Jason Denniston.

JOURNALISM: First row: Jennifer Denniston, Jennifer Pendleton Second row: Kim Contreraz, Joe Beracy, Trina Sopocy, Tony Bush Third row: Jaime Morris, Brianna Yelsik, Heidi VanZee Fourth row: Jason Saylor, Travis Polash, Shawna Bornemann Fifth row: Robert Czeiszperger, Jamie Contreraz, Sara McGillis, Mrs. Suzanne Luneack.

J. Morris

J. Ortman