Freshmen's dance ends school year,
starts new tradition.

With every year comes change. This year was no exception. From the new exam policy to more spirit than ever, this year has been in a class of its own.

Among the many changes was the End of the Year Dance. This was the first year that the freshmen put on a dance at the closing of the year.

Many new dance crazes were introduced at this dance. Several people opened "mosh" pits and Travis Polash body-surfed the crowd. "I felt special being the first person to body-surf at Ashley," commented Travis.

Emotions ran wild for everyone, knowing this was the last dance for the seniors and for the year. "It was really sad because many of my friends are seniors. This is the last dance we will all be together at," stated Shari Drummond.
