"Even when they were still young, I could see the endless possibilities in them," said Mrs. Lynn Fortney, the juniors' second grade teacher. Other teachers agree. Since they have been in high school, they have made a huge impact.

Class sponsor, Miss Michelle Moore, said, "I like how they all work together to get something done." Classmates agree. Kristen Fabus, reflecting on her friends, commented, "We all work together, but push each other along the way. We challenge each other to become better."

One of the best examples of their creative talents is homecoming floats which they have built and which have taken first prize every year since they were seventh graders. Class President Kerri McCrimmon said, "It shows the creativity and hard work that our class possesses."

I DON'T GET IT! John Fabus is busy preparing for the writing proficiency test administered in March. Passing the test earned the juniors an endorsed diploma.
