Speaking with actions can be just as strong as speaking with words. Whichever way you choose to speak, make sure you always "Leave'em with something to think about."

Sometimes people are often short of words or just find it hard to express their feelings. So they use actions to get their point across. Actions can be just as powerful... actions can show the feelings that words can't express.

son during a slow song. Even though words are not spoken, the communication is still there. When you greet a new student at school, a handshake or smile can be just fine. Words are great, but sometimes what we do is even more eloquent.
