

Excitement

the thrill of being involved

If you want something to talk about, well, organizations give you plenty. Take, for instance SADD. They made everyone talk, with their reenactment of an accident caused by drunk driving, held on the last day of SADD Awareness Week in May. Lisa Maier is still talking about it. She commented, "I believe that the mock accident showed everyone that drinking and driving is a very serious thing. It's nothing to joke about." However, SADD is not the only organization that gives you something to talk about. There's always Drama Club. Who could ever forget Chris Burgett's "Bubba", in the play "Hollywood Hillbillies?" Chris commented, "I really didn't have to act, I could just be myself and I still made everyone laugh."

For sure, watching Chris slither around the stage on his belly during the entire performance was one of the highlights of the play.

Student Council is another of those groups that gives us lots to get excited about: Homecoming and Twirp Week are two major events of the year, and with parades, Kings, Queens, and class competitions, usually leave us screaming. "I think it gives students a chance to relax and not worry about school work," stated Amanda Barror.

As I was saying...

*I would like to be a lot of things, but I enjoy being outside and working with heavy equipment so I'll probably be a farmer...

*I think that you should have respect for your elders and friends. You don't see a lot of that any more; it's too bad...

*My hobbies are fishing and spending time with the ones I love...
