

CRASH COURSE

When Ashley students and spectators hurried to the scene, the only thing they could see was Lisa Maier's lifeless form draped limply over the top of the car's hood. A small boy's bloody body lay stretched on the pavement in front of the car's twisted fender. It was an extraordinary show put on by the Ashley SADD committee. SADD Week was very touching, yet realistic for the students and staff at Ashley High School. It was filled with many different activities against drinking and driving. The SADD commit tee drew up posters, gave out Dum Dum suckers, and even went as far as reenacting a car accident involving alcohol. SADD students Brian Krueger, Lisa Maier, Jon Whitford, and Peggy Wirt were involved in the "car accident". SADD volunteers also hope the kids learned from the whole week of activities. "I don't care if kids drink. Most of them are going to do it anyway, but the important thing is that no one drives," said senior SADD President Beth Schulz.

I DIDN'T DO IT! Brian Krueger plays the "innocent" drunk, as police try to apprehend him.

PLEASE LISTEN! Beth Schulz reads a poem expressing her thoughts about drinking. The assembly was held immediately following the mock accident involving drinking and driving.
