

Pep Power

Gather
+ Have Fun

Although the number of assemblies fluctuates from year to year, there's always a constant yearning for another one. You can always count on a self-esteem assembly, the traditional SADD assembly, and you can surely count on lots of pep assemblies. Assemblies, by far one of the most joyfully attended functions here at school. Why not get out of seventh hour for the last ten minutes for a pep assembly, or get out of a whole class period for an informational assembly;

you can't go wrong.

The main reason assemblies like the Jay Lafoon Assembly are provided for students is because they brighten our days and give us just a little more bounce to our steps; they make us happy and help us all to cope with our problems, whatever they are. The vast majority liked this particular assembly, but we all have our personal favorites.

"My favorite assemblies are at the end of the day, because you can skip the rest of school and no one ever notices," Laurie Jones boldly stated. Although that may be a perk for some students, many love the late afternoon pre-game rallies for other reasons. "I like the intensity and the emotions of the pep assemblies," said Doug Turner. "They get everyone fired up for a big game." Even though opinions vary about the many different assemblies, one thing's for sure... they're good.

Kevin Fabus

L. Strnad

LET'S GO BLUE! Dan Grollimund, Chris Burgett, Dave Polash, Brian Krueger, Doug Turner, and Dave Strnad all give senior speeches at the Homecoming pep rally.

K. Mepham

OH NO, WE'RE NEXT! Mindy Wallen and Lisa Strnad wait to make their campaign speeches. Mindy and Lisa ran for Co-Presidents of the student council.