

Join in the party

"I decided to run for student council president so that I could make the school a better place, and try to provoke more pride and school spirit in the student body, and I feel that this year went really well in that sense," stated Lisa Strnad, one of the student council co-presidents who helped end the century at Ashley High School.

Ashley High School is a school full of interesting, innovative, mind-provoking, fun activities, all thanks to the many organizations that provide an out from all the classes that plague the day, and will prove to definitely end this century in a divine way.

If it's getting out of class early to go to a quiz team meet, joining in on the homecoming class competition assemblies, or just sitting back to enjoy a drama club play instead of one of Mrs. Martinez's famous movies, it all sums up to one word, "fun," and it's all thanks to the organizations.

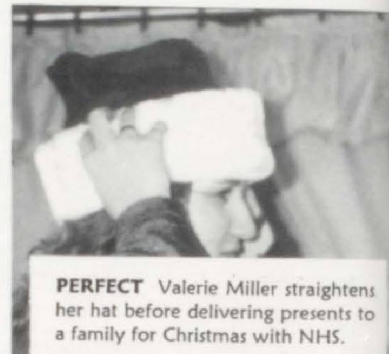

"I'm glad that I joined quiz team because it was a really good experience. I got to learn a lot, and it was a lot of fun," commented rookie quiz team member, freshman Brandon Beck.

Aside from all the fun, the organizations provide an outside learning source apart from regular school, and help us prepare better for the new millenium awaiting us after this year ends. "I have strived harder to get better grades, and I've been trying to set a better example for the younger students since I've been in National Honors Society," remarked senior Matt Schueller.

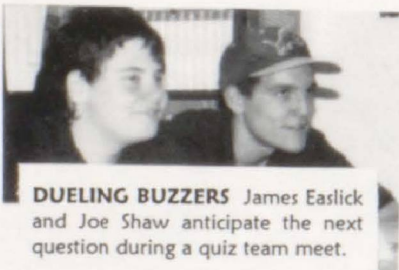

The many organizations that are available to students not only affect the people in them, but the whole student body, and bring a lot of fun and excitement to the everyday pressures of high school life. It's those interesting moments provided by the organizations that makes the best memories, and bring out the best in all of us.

I'LL BE A GOOD KING Kevin Fabus catches the crowd's attention when he walks out in tights as the prince.

PERFECT Valerie Miller straightens her hat before delivering presents to a family for Christmas with NHS.

DUELING BUZZERS James Easlick and Joe Shaw anticipate the next question during a quiz team meet.

DRAGON Brandon Beck shocks the crowd as he walks out onto stage as the dragon during a drama club performance.