

Thrills

What was the most exciting part of Homecoming Week? Was it: (a) the many relays, (b) the goofy dress up days, or (c) being able to get out of class early? Read on...

Homecoming Week. A whole week of fun, excitement, and anticipation. A week where all of the classes come together to compete in several different competitions.

So, what is the best part of Homecoming Week? Is it the challenging relays, the art of dressing up, or the getting out of class? "You get to spend time with your friends, stretch out the rules, and have fun," commented Michelle Duranso. Amy Dawson, a student council representative stated, "I got out of every single class that I have at least once during that week trying to get every thing done that needed to be done for that day's activities. It was cool to an extent, but you end up with a lot of homework."

Mrs. Sherry Reichard stated, "I liked seeing the spirit that our school does have and hopefully in years to come we can build on that."

The relays were one of a kind this year and a lot of people really got into them. "I participated in the toilet paper race. You had to push the roll across the gym floor with your nose," said Amanda Pearson.

Some people might feel that Homecoming Week is the same every year and that there is never anything new and exciting. Mrs. Reichard has to disagree. "There is always a new element to it even if some things stay the same."

Have you ever taken the time to think about how much work it takes to put together the whole Homecoming scheme? Amy Dawson said, "Getting ready for the slave auction seemed to take forever, but once it came, everything just fell into place. It was just really cool because everyone was having a lot of fun. I knew that if I hadn't organized it, that it wouldn't have happened. That's a surprisingly good feeling."

This year's Homecoming Week was one never to be forgotten.

Kristin Mepham

K. Mepham

THE SPICE GIRLS? Mrs. Martinez, Mrs. Burk, Mrs. Thompson, Mrs. Reichard, Mrs. Fabus, Miss Landis, and Mr. Starry enjoy a little stardom at the annual lip sync competition.