

2000 Unique individuals

One thing the senior class is known for is their individuality and uniqueness. They are all different, but they still get along with one another. "We all have our own little groups that hang out and enjoy different things, yet we all enjoy each other," Lissa Czeiszberger commented.

Val Miller recalled a time that stands out in her memory, "When Jason and I did Barbie girl in the eleventh grade lip sync for Twirp Week." As class president Val also recognized, that Mr. Andersen, senior advisor, was very organized, and always on top of getting things done. In return, Mr. Andersen mentioned that he would miss Val's work as president. He commented, "She has done a tremendous amount of work for the class."

The seniors admitted there were a few things that spooked them about the thought of graduating. Miranda Coon stated, "I guess it's the anxiety about the future. . . where I will go and where my friends are going to go." Miranda is most excited about "... starting over, making new friends, and being responsible for only myself."

Even though the seniors will move on this year, they will always have a connection with all the years they shared in high school.

Jessica McMann

STRANGE Amy Dawson and Mrs. Suzanne Luneach make their way to the 2nd annual student council sponsored Halloween costume contest.

J. Diffin

B. Franks

J. Diffin

CHILLIN' Kevin Fabus hangs out in one of AHS students' favorite places to hang during lunch hour, the gym.

THE SENIOR SPIRITS Seniors Roy Burgett, Amy Dawson, Steve Lowell, Josh Saylor, Miranda Coon, and Jason McCrimmon sing Christmas carols while taped to the wall for the first annual deck the halls contest.

