

D. Landis

YEE HAW! Junior Aaron Grollimund plays his fiddle during the lip sync to take a tie for second place with the eighth graders.

Sometimes you just need to be heard.

D. Landis

"WE GOT ROBBED ON OUR RATINGS," said seventh grader Mike Bates. "How much could it cost to buy a lip sync?" The seventh grade ended up with fifth place after their first Twirp Week lip sync.

Lip Sync 2000

"WE KILLED 'EM!" exclaims senior Jason McCrimmon. The seniors took first place in the lip sync this year during Twirp Week.

You're on stage dancing and your lips are moving but no sound is coming out. Nevertheless, your audience, your fellow classmates, are cheering for you and rolling on the ground in laughter. So where are you? You're in this year's lip sync contest for Twirp Week 2000.

"I think that I made a great Christina Aguilera...what a girl wants," stated sophomore Jill Cermak. Regardless of what place they came in, everyone had fun and did a great job although there were a few people who thought that they could've done better. "I didn't think any of them were quite as good as they were last year. They just didn't have a real point to the songs," commented Brandon Beck.

The seniors' performance was a big hit as Kevin Fabus ripped three flannel shirts off in the middle of the song. They came in first place with the song "Sold" by John Michael Montgomery. "We definitely deserved first place, but that's just because we're us," laughed Kevin McGillis.

A real fitting performance was done by the seventh graders. The class danced to the song "Millennium" by Will Smith, a great song to mark the first lip sync contest for the new millenium.

-Amy Walter