

is because too many people were loading up on these classes and thought it was supposed to be an easy A. But it's more than that.

"I like being able to decorate the bulletin board and help the teacher because it makes me feel needed," Tara Thompson shared.

Some students like it because there's no homework. "I became a cadet teacher because I wanted a class where I didn't have to do real school work," exclaimed Rob Beam.

But these classes are more than a free hour; a lot of people, though, have misconceptions about service learning.

Mr. Brian Gavenda commented, "Sometimes my cadets start off under the assumption that they won't ever have to do much. Somedays I don't ask for much, but other days I really need them to get some things done." Other students get more out of it than that. "I like helping the ones with the most needs; I get to feel like I am helping our future develop," said Heather Demoinés. Maybe they're the next generations of teachers, but right now they are the teachers' right hands.

-Kari Bearden

THINGS I LIKE ABOUT SERVICE LEARNING.

Andrew Mills: "No homework!"

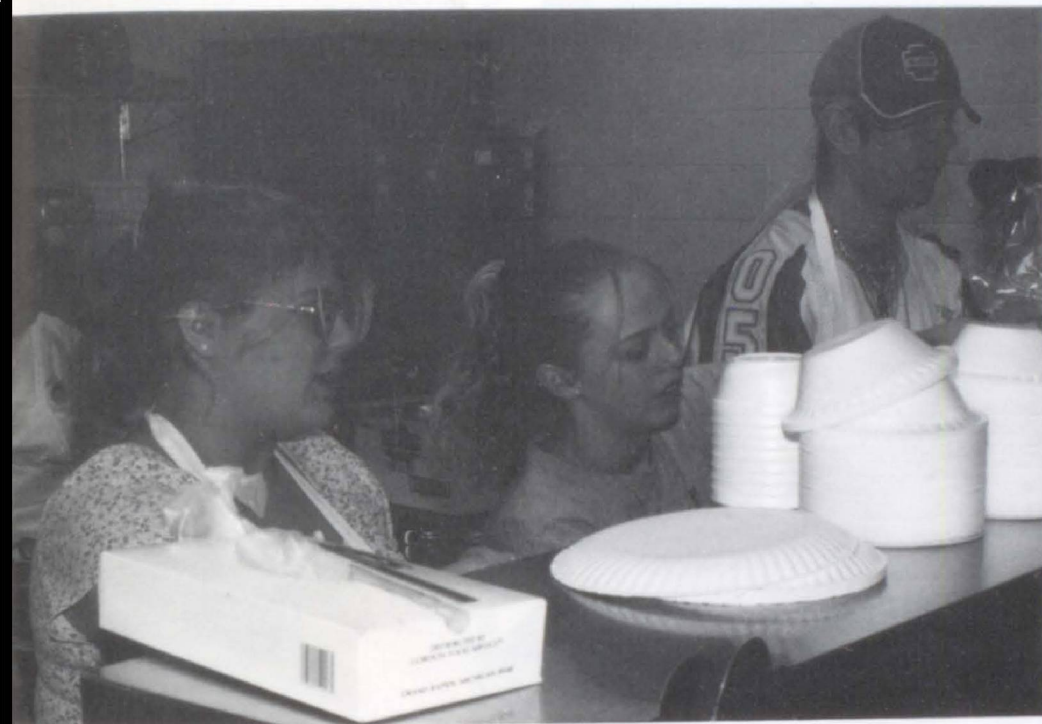

Stacie Wargo: "Not having to stay in class the whole hour."

Gordon Matrau: "It's really easy."

Josh Adams: "Everything!"

Amanda Prestage: "It's fun and I get some free time."

Lucas Studt: "I get to hang out with Mary all hour."

J. Diffin

BIG BOWL OR SMALL During noon hour, Holly Stoneman, Kari Bearden, and Aaron Schulz serve lunch to the junior high and high school students. "The little kids are very picky," commented Holly.

THIS IS A LOT OF WORK Amanda Barror helps unload a box of biscuits during second hour. "I like to help in the kitchen, it makes me feel needed," stated Amanda.

J. Diffin

J. Diffin

WHERE'S THAT PAGE Chris Reynolds prepares to copy some papers for Ms. Jen Brown. Chris cadets for Ms. Brown during fourth hour.