

Learning Lifetime Skills

J. Diffin

J. Diffin

Ask what technology classes and life management classes have in common and you won't find many answers except one... lifetime skills. Both classes help in the building of your life, whether it's learning to fix something or learning how to manage your time. "The information that is given in class will be used no matter what career path is taken," commented Ms. Sherry Reichard, life management teacher. Lifetime skills help you succeed in the future because they teach students how to problem-solve. In classes such as Applied Tech

LOOP AND PULL While preparing his CO2 car for a race, Craig Densmore threads a string through his car. Craig was in Mr. Todd Starry's Applied Tech class. "I enjoyed building these cars, it was pretty cool," exclaimed Craig.

POP A SQUAT Applying the "can I sit on it" test, Mr. Todd Starry, applies his weight to a chair made in his Applied Tech class. "I was a bit nervous that I would fall," shared Mr. Starry.