

CHANGES

S. Densmore

TOOT, TOOT! Seventh grader Shana Pupava plays her flute while participating in the Spring Band Concert.

Little people with big changes is one way to describe the seventh grade class this year. Stepping up can be very difficult and it takes a lot of courage from the younger kids as well as the older ones.

"It's a little bit harder for me to adjust because I have so many teachers, but there is also a lot more people to hang out with instead of just all the people in my class," commented Matt Elliot.

Seventh grade is all part of the learning process where we need to develop into our true selves and branch away from the things we are used to, but we also need to have fun in the process of changing.

Annette Cermak

What if...

You had to name the most terrifying moment of your life so far, what would it be and why?

"For me it would have to be when Katie Beracy and I got into a big fight, because I thought that I had lost my best friend," commented Shana Pupava.

"The most terrifying thing that ever happened to me was when my grandpa was in the hospital and I was scared that he wouldn't make it," stated Barbara Gall.

