he junior high girls' basketball team faced a long tough road in their six game season. But, optimistically, this was just the beginning of a great high school career in basketball.

The lil' girl Cubs took their first step in the process toward a good, four-year program.

Kelsi Mizer said she's excited about high school basketball. She said the best part about it was, "Getting the experience that a lot of people don't get a chance for. The chance to play sports and all."

The girls realized a lot about this season, elements needed to play basketball to the fullest. Keri Good explained, "I learned just how much working as a team actually does help. The game against Sacred Heart helped me learn that."

The end has come for some of the junior high girls' basketball days, but they have a broader understanding of the game. This season was very successful in the preparation for the future. The Bears didn't always win, but winning isn't everything. They have begun to walk the trail and leave their footprints behind.
