Remember Tonight

FOR ALL TIMES

Homecoming night 2001, the team aligned the field. As the Star Spangled Banner rang out, streams of red, white, and blue balloons painted the night sky. The crowd stood strong and proud, despite several tears that were to be shed that night. Kick-off came and went, yet the game seemed to last an eternity. "When you're down, the losing feeling drags the night on," remarked Senior representative, Lucas Stude. After coming out at half time in a shut-out bind there was a brief moment in time where all was forgotten and a fairy tale began as the King and Queen began their reign. "It would have been too good to be true, to be crowned and win the game all in the same night," said King, Troy Adams. Though the game ended in a 40-6 loss, the night will always be remembered. Lyndsay Goward
