

Make Smart Decisions

"I hope that the assembly and nurse presentation made a large enough impression on everyone that we will never have to live through the horror of losing one of our students to a drunk driving accident."
 -Marilyn Gearhart

This year the Students Against Destructive Decisions and the school invited two friendly faces to help them remember to be safe. These two people were Tammy Terrell, a nurse from Carson City hospital who showed the students a slide show of car accidents, and the second was State Trooper Jodi Arrowood, who brought in the vision impaired goggles for the students.

HELP ME CUT THIS RIBBON

Jeremy Polash helps Cassandra Richmond cut some ribbons that support making responsible decisions and not drinking and driving.

THIS IS NO PROBLEM

Jerad Wallen follows the line with no problem, while wearing the impaired vision goggles. "It wasn't as hard as I thought it would be," commented Jerad.

PASS OUT THE RIBBONS ...

Angie Strouse, the SADD treasurer, had the fun job of handing out ribbons to all who attended the assembly. "SADD is a worthwhile organization that I think more people should participate in, because in the end, it saves people's lives."

"I'LL NEVER SEE YOU AGAIN"

Sarah Johnston reads a poem for the SADD assembly. "It was a very moving poem. I felt honored to read it. It just went to show that the irony of life is something that we cannot escape."
