The turn of this page marks the end of yet another school year. This summer break is different from others. When we departed, everything was just as normal as always. When we return in the fall, everything will be different. The two-story building is now just a pile of rubble and an AHS memory. The long and tedious process of demolition and rebuilding is now underway.

AHS will not look the same - There will be new additions and some things you have grown to love will be gone. Not to worry though, these cosmetic changes won't change anything about Ashley's character or the staff and students that call this home. We'll just call it an extreme makeover for a tired old building and its scholarly residents that was truly needed. Sometime in the near future, a fully functioning, new AHS will appear "Out of the Blue", and be ready to host the 2005-2006 school year. See you then!

What we left after the 2004-2005 school year

The demolition begins ...

It stood for decades and was gone in an instant.

The construction begins ...
