

More than students

Ashley students are not only students, but active members of the community as well. As a small school, students are quick to stand up for one another and offer help to those in need. Friendships and relationships are formed that last a lifetime. Throughout the school year, Ashley students volunteered and participated in countless activities during and after school. They gave up their weekends to help run shops and activities for the North Pole Express. They organized food and items to handout to the community and also donated blood. Ashley students never lack in their spirit of giving and support of one another. During school hours, they help each other through math classes and science projects. They learn on the job skills that will help them succeed once their time at Ashley has ended. This year Ashley was challenged by Merrill to compete in a battle of the fans. Never ones to shy away from an opportunity to show their Ashley pride, students and staff showed up in their spirit gear and cheered loud and proud for an Ashley victory. Our students lead by example and when asked to describe them one can only say they are truly more than words can say.

Hard Work Pays Off

Ashley students work hard all year long to achieve goals together whether it's a class project or community activities. They also like bonding together whether it's in the hallways or classrooms before and after school.

Hands On Activities

Ashley students enjoy creative activities that get them thinking and using their hands to build and create. Students work hard in S.T.E.M. and Chemistry making things that gets their minds moving. They also enjoy making ornaments for the Polar Express too.
